Chapter #1:

Dog Hot Spots: How to Get Rid of Them Fast

Brandon Roe

Symptoms

Does your dog have the following symptoms?

- Licking, biting and chewing a spot on the skin endlessly.
- The spot suddenly increases in a matter of hours, sometimes with pus inside.
- The sore may sometimes ooze pus or blood out.
- The hot spot loses hair.
- The sore smells funny.
- Your usually friendly hairball best friend is now bad tempered and growls at you when you accidentally touch him/her.

If your dog has these symptoms and if the spot seems to breed other spots like it, then your dog may be experiencing what veterinarians call pyotraumatic dermatitis, or hot spots.

A dog hot spot is a very annoying skin lesion that can grow rapidly if left untreated. These infuriating nuisances on your little pooch are not only making him or her suffer, it can also make your doggie friend look like he or she has a contagious disease.

Causes

Here are 3 of the main causes of a dog hot spot:

1. Hot spots are usually seen in dogs that have furry coats like Shih-Tzu's or Pomeranians because they are more susceptible to get tangled and matted hair that causes these irritating pyotraumatic dermatitis. Also, dogs with long coats are more prone to have trapped dead hair inside the skin which is also something that causes hot spots.

2. Dogs with allergic reactions to house dust, household chemicals, commercial dog food and even plant pollen are also vulnerable to hot spots.
3. Other dogs are just plain hyper and will end up biting, licking and gnawing at themselves if left alone. This can also cause hot spots to appear.

Solution

If you see that your loyal four-legged best friend has a hot spot then you must act quickly. Below are steps you can take to treat this horrible condition:

- First of all, isolate the area by trimming the hair around the sore itself to prevent the spreading of the infection. Some find it easier to wipe away the fur if you put some water-based jelly on the fur that you will trim off. Trimming the hair around the spot not only makes it easier to treat the spot, it will also lessen the cause of itchiness.
- Clean the sore well by using a mild antiseptic soap. Thoroughly wash the area to make sure no residual soap is left that can cause further irritation.
- You need to dry out the sore so that it will not flame up and have some pus in it. Do this by applying wet tea bags on the sore.
- A number of natural products have also proven to be very effective against dog hot spots. Among these are witch hazel and apple cider vinegar. Tepezcohuite, which forms the foundation of one of my pet related products (www.k9klearup.com), has been found to be quite effective on hot spots as well, so much so that we guarantee it's efficacy

Dog Skin Secret #1

Take advantage of your dog's natural immune system. Product's like K9 KlearUp work naturally with your dog's body to help clear up hot spots much faster...

Prevention

In preventing hot spots, you need to address the causes of course. So make sure you brush your furry friend's coat all the time to avoid tangles, clean your home or the area where your pooch loves to play regularly and give him or her proper exercise so your doggie pal will not get restless and mutilate his or her own skin.

So there you have it, some simple solutions to help get rid of a dog hot spot. Your dog should be wagging his tail again in no time!

Dog Scratching: What You Can Do to Help Your Pooch Stop The Itch!

Brandon Roe

There is nothing better to a dog owner than to see his pet healthy, active and happy. A common reason for the transformation of your dog from happy to sad is due to dog scratching. Dogs just can't stand being uncomfortable. They scratch every part they can possibly reach once that itchy feeling comes their way.

Dog scratching is something a dog owner must address. It brings about much stress and trauma to your dog, especially when dog cuts come about. The itchy sensation makes the dog scratch and scratch, not being aware that he is making the problem worse. Of course, all he's thinking is, "Get rid of this irritating itch!".

Causes

A dog may appear active and playful, and yet be feeling very sore. There are various reasons for the dog scratching problem. It is likely because they have a specific skin issue, such as dermatitis.

Dermatitis can be environmental, nutritional, parasitic, infectious or bacterial. Now, what the dog owner must do first is to contact a veterinarian. As soon as it's noticed, the "dog scratching" problem must be given your full attention, as it may cause serious long-term skin problems if not dealt with early. A dog owner must work hand in hand with his vet, taking the full responsibility of relaying all the necessary information about his dog. With the cooperation of the owner, the vet would be able to identify the possible causes.

Solution

As soon as the cause of the dog scratching is identified, the dog must be treated immediately. Of course, depending on the specific cause, the owner must make some changes in order for the skin problem to totally heal. For instance, dog scratching problems can happen to dogs that are allergic to lawn grass (strange but true).

You may also want to consider products that specialize in treating dog scratching. There are a variety out there but one of the most effective ones I've ever seen contains the Mayan traditional herb Tepezcohuite. (In fact, I was so impressed with its natural abilities that I created an all-natural dog balm called K9 KlearUp around this compound - www.k9klearup.com. It's guaranteed to help clear up the 17 most common canine skin and coat problems).

So there you have it, some simple solutions to help get rid of annoying dog scratching. Your dog will be wagging his tail again in no time!

Have An Itchy Dog?

Consider These Grooming Tips Before Turning To Chemical Treatments

Alexandra DeBoer

Many dogs today suffer from itchy skin caused by a variety of factors. Dogs actually have more sensitive skin than humans, and are often exposed to a variety of irritants in their environment. These grooming tips may help alleviate your dog's constant itching.

Brushing your dog daily will remove pollens, grasses, and other outdoor irritants as well as stimulating the skin's circulation and preventing matting. Brush carefully and down to the skin, taking care not to tug on tangles, and using a soft bristle brush on sensitive areas.

Bathing should also be done on a monthly basis, following a thorough brushing. Use a natural, low lather, low irritant shampoo, wet your dog down thoroughly with lukewarm water, and apply the shampoo using your hands. Avoid getting water or shampoo in his eyes and ears, and lather all over, right down to his skin, then rinse thoroughly. Shampoo residue is a major cause of skin irritation for dogs. After rinsing, towel dry your dog, and avoid using any coat finishers or blow dryers, which can also cause skin irritation in a sensitive dog.

Dog Skin Secret #2

Shampoo residue is a major cause of skin irritation for dogs. Go for natural, low lather, low irritant shampoos for healthier dog skin.

Grooming is essential for a dog's skin health, helps you identify skin problems early on, and is a great way for you to bond with your dog as well!

Chapter #4:

How To Use Regular Grooming To Keep Your Dog Healthy

Terrie Simpson

The grooming procedure is not only a relaxing way to bond with your dog, it is also known to be stress buster for the owner. It has been rumored that people who have dogs have lower blood pressure. Before embarking on any grooming tasks such as nail clipping, flea dipping, bathing, trimming, cleaning the eyes, ears, mouth and teeth, or anal gland expression always consult a professional. Many reputable breeders, groomers and veterinarians will give basic instruction to a new owner to help maintain the health and appearance of their new companion.

Most owners, especially of long coated dogs take their pet to a professional for grooming. All dogs including short-coated breeds require some form of regular grooming. Grooming can be done professionally, but the benefits of learning some basic grooming techniques are bountiful.

Grooming tools should include dog nail clippers, a pair of blunt nose scissors for long coated dogs, a comb, and a brush suitable for the length of the dogs hair. Plenty of patience and TLC are also required.

Starting your dog on a regular grooming routine should be introduced by gradual short sessions. Try not to frighten the dog by forcing the issue. As the dog becomes relaxed with the routine, the sessions can be lengthened and other aspects introduced.

Brushing is an easy routine to start and it has many benefits. In addition to having a dog with a shiny, mat free coat, it removes loose hairs that might otherwise end up on your clothes, furniture or carpet. While brushing the dog the owner can check the skin for various skin disease, lumps, hot spots, fleas and ticks.

Depending on the breed, types of exercise, and whether the dog is an indoor or outdoor dog, bathing requirements will differ. Bathing too frequently will remove essential natural oils and dry the skin. Check with a professional for recommendations for your specific breed of dog.

Nail trimming is another grooming technique which is beneficial for an owner to practice. Before attempting to cut your dogs nails, it is a good idea to get professional instruction. Untrimmed nails can ingrow, curl down into the pads, and cause the toes to spread making it difficult for the dog to walk. Long nails can scratch the floor, people, and tear furniture and carpet. Most dogs and their owners are quite nervous about clipping the nails. Clip only a little at a time, being careful not only to cut into the vein. Cutting into the vein not only hurts the dog but will also cause a lot of bleeding.

Grooming methods, tools, and other aids will vary depending on the proficiency of the owner, the breed of dog, and the situation for which the grooming may be necessary. This column touches only on basic items. It cannot be stressed too lightly that a new owner should seek professional help before embarking on anything new with their dog, be it grooming or exercise.

Time For A Dog Bath?

Dog Bathing Tips For You And Your Dog

Teresa James

Cleanliness and proper grooming can be very important to the continued good health of our beloved pets. But bathing our puppy or adult dog can often prove to be a challenge. There are many questions, myths and opinions floating around when discussing the best care for different dog types and temperaments. Check out these dog bathing tips to get some great ideas so you'll be prepared for your next dog bath and grooming session.

How often should you bath your dog?

How often your pet will need a dog bath will depend on the breed and what type of activities the dog is involved in. It's best to bathe your dog only when your dog is really dirty. Just use your nose – that tell tale doggy smell will let you know it's time for a bath.

If a dog is bathed too often the skin will be stripped of its natural, protective oils. This will result in dry itchy skin, which will cause your dog to scratch, further irritating the already sensitive skin. If you need to bathe your dog more frequently make sure to use a pet shampoo that will also moisturize your dog's skin. You may also want to follow up with an after bath pet coat conditioner specifically formulated for dry skin.

Where's the best place to bath your dog?

In warm weather you can bathe your dog outside. Pick a place that will not turn to mud when it gets wet. It's a good idea to have a washtub large enough for your dog to stand up in and fill it with a few inches of water. Water straight from a garden hose may start off warm, but usually gets cold very fast. If your dog starts to resist and shiver, as the water gets colder, you may want to consider another option.

Many pet owners have overcome this problem by purchasing a raised dog bath. This convenient, back-saving dog bath is often used with a water temperature mixer valve assembly that completely solves this problem. With the proper equipment set up you'll be able to save your back and control the water temperature of your dog's bath. Some temperature mixer valve assemblies hook up to your existing washing machine water supply. At bath time just connect an ordinary garden hose to the valve assembly and run it outside to the bathing area. This convenient type of back-saving dog bath can even be used for bathing your dog inside.

If you choose to bathe your dog inside, regulating the water temperature shouldn't be a problem. But deciding where to bathe your dog might be. Small dogs and puppies can usually be bathed easily in a sink or a washtub. For bigger dogs you will need something bigger like a bathtub or a large shower stall. And of course, the bigger your dog is the bigger the potential hassles.

Are you tired of chasing and wrestling with your dog at bath time?

Many dog owners solve this problem by purchasing a raised dog bath. An ergonomically designed dog grooming bathing tub elevates your dog to a level that's comfortable for you and keeps your dog securely contained, taking the hassle out of washing your dog. You'll get the job done in half the time, save your back and stay dryer. The raised dog bath that is available in most pet shops and online stores will also save your dog stress at bath time. No more slipping and sliding. Your dog will really feel secure standing on the padded non-slip surface. This type of raised dog bath has been recommended by Dog World Magazine in their "Notable Products for the New Millennium".

Does your dog tend to get away from you during a bath?

Bathing your dog is a challenging, but essential, part of dog grooming. It's funny how your dog will cleverly evade you when you try to get him into a dog bath, but will be just as determined to get past you when you don't want him to jump into the water at the beach.

If you're washing your dog in a room with a door make sure to close it so that your dog will not see an escape route or get very far if he prematurely gets out of the bath. This way you'll have an easier time getting him back in the tub to finish the job. It can be a challenge bathing a dog that's wiggling around but the challenge gets a little tougher when your dog is an escape artist. If your dog takes any opportunity to get away from you at bath time you may want to consider restraining your dog.

Restraints are used during bath time to avoid injury to you as well as your pet. Some pet bathing tubs come with restraints included. With these your dog will be safely and securely restrained and you will be able to give your dog a quick and hassle-free bath.

Is your dog slipping and sliding in the bath?

Slipping and sliding can be the most stressful part of bath time for a dog. Put a rubber mat down on the bottom surface of the tub to prevent your dog from sliding and getting hurt. A sure-footed dog will be less resistant and much more at ease during bath time.

Things to have on hand at bath time:

- ✓ Raised Dog Bath
This is a fantastic idea for a dog bath. It's ergonomically designed for both you and your dog's comfort. Your local pet groomer is likely to have just such a bathing station set up in their shop. If you're thinking about buying a tub or basin to bathe your dog in, ask them if you can check out their tub set up. If you have the room or more than one dog, you may find it worthwhile.
- ✓ Pet Shower or Plastic Pitcher
A pet shower is great, but if that's not possible make sure you have a large plastic pitcher for wetting and rinsing your dog.
- ✓ Drain Screen
Make sure to protect your plumbing from hair clogs with a simple to use drain screen.
  - ✓ Cotton Balls
Cotton balls can be placed in each ear to prevent water from running into your dog's ears.
  - ✓ Pet Shampoos
There are many different pet shampoos each formulated to work on problems such as dry itchy skin, inflamed or dry scaling skin, fleas & ticks, doggy odor, skunk odor, abnormal shedding, quick rinsing for dogs that don't like to take a bath, whiteners for white coats, color intensifiers for dark coats, and coat shine to bring out the natural luster of your dog's coat. You may want to try a hypoallergenic shampoo/conditioner that will gently clean and conditioner your pet's coat in one step.
  - ✓ Coat Conditioners
There are many pet coat conditioners that will help manage and or improve the appearance of your dog's coat like crème rinse, grooming spray, after bath dry skin treatment, and herbal mist conditioner that will soothe, re-moisturize and detangle your pet's coat.

✓ Pet Drying Towels

If you want to get your dog dry faster check out a specialty pet-drying towel. Some are available that will absorb 10 times its own weight in water!

✓ Eye Protective Gel

Are you concerned about shampoo making its way into your dog's eyes? Just put a little protective eye gel in each eye just before bath time to prevent burning and redness.

✓ Ear Drying Solution

If your dog is prone to ear infections make sure you have some ear-drying solution on hand. Using an ear drying solution will assure that the ear canal is nice and dry after bathing.

✓ Brushes/Combs

There are many different styles and sizes of traditional dog grooming brushes and combs that you can choose from. If your dog has very sensitive or irritated skin you may want to consider a higher quality brush that will not scratch the skin or aggravate existing skin irritations.

✓ Pet Dryer

If your dog has a thick, long or double coat it's best to use a pet dryer. Unlike "people" hair dryers, pet dryers are designed to use less heat and more air volume so they quickly and safely dry a dog without damaging the coat or burning the skin. If you use a "people" blow dryer be very careful since you can easily burn your pet!

✓ Plastic Bucket

It's very convenient to have a waterproof container that will keep your dog grooming supplies close at hand.

Remember to get all your dog grooming supplies ready before hand and let your dog sniff everything.

Why you should brush your dog thoroughly before bathing.

Depending on the type of coat your dog has you may need an assortment of grooming brushes and combs to properly care for your dog's skin and coat. Before you bathe your dog it's always a good idea to brush your pet's coat thoroughly to remove any tangles or matted areas as well as any other foreign debris. Many dog owners know first hand that if they don't spend time removing old, established tangles and mats before bathing many times they just get worse. If your dog's coat tangles and mats easily make sure to look for shampoos and conditioners that are formulated to prevent and break up mats.

If your dog has gotten into any sticky or gooey substances like tar or gum never use commercial solvents or industrial cleaners on your dog's coat. Many of these are toxic to your dog. Try dissolving these substances with mineral oil. If you're unable to remove something from your dog's coat carefully snip away the affected area. It's always best to sacrifice some hair or fur since it will grow back rather than risk damage to the skin. Brush your dog thoroughly between baths, daily if you can, to distribute the natural oils and remove tangles, mats and foreign matter.

Dog Skin Secret #3

Never use commercial solvents or industrial cleaners on your dog's coat. Many of these are toxic to your dog. Try dissolving these substances with mineral oil.

Choosing the best pet shampoo/coat conditioner for your dog.

Always use a pet shampoo that is specially formulated for the pH of your pet's skin. Never use "people" shampoos since our skin pH level is much more acidic than our canine friends and could irritate your dog's skin.

Start bathing your dog at the beginning: Your Dog's Head.

A popular bathing technique is to start at your dog's head and work your way toward the tail. This is especially the case if it's possible that fleas are present. If you know that your dog has fleas you may want to use a flea & tick shampoo. Starting at your dog's head forces any fleas to gather away from your dog's face, eyes, and ears. It is much easier to dunk the rear of your dog into the tub than your dog's face. As you may imagine, your dog is likely to be much more cooperative by following this simple bathing technique.

Let your dog get used to the sound of the running water. If you're using a tub or basin fill it with a few inches of warm water. Then get your dog into the bath. If you're using a raised dog bath just secure your dog into the dog bath. Starting from the head thoroughly wet your dog with warm water. You can use a plastic pitcher or a spray nozzle for this task. If you're using a spray nozzle make sure the spray is not too strong. Never spray water directly onto your dog's face or genitals.

Apply a pet shampoo/coat conditioner. Follow the instructions on the package. Work it in from the head to the tail. Be sure to get all those nooks and crannies; like the rectum, between the toes, behind the ears and under the chin. Be careful not to get shampoo in your dog's eyes. If this is a concern you can protect your dog's eyes by putting some protective eye gel in each eye just before getting your dog into the bath.

Rinse your dog thoroughly with warm water. Shampoo residue can cause skin irritations so make sure you give your dog's coat a thorough rinsing. Towel drying your pet's coat in the dog bath will remove some of the excess water before you take your dog out of the tub. Some breeds should never be rubbed, only patted, since their coats easily tangle. Dog owners often prefer to use dedicated pet towels. There are pet drying towels available that will absorb 10 times their weight in water. These are very handy towels to use for a dog bath and can also be used any time your pet gets wet.

Although many dog owners think of bathing their dog as a challenge, with the right approach, supplies, and equipment, you can get through it relatively unscathed. And don't forget to reward your dog's good behavior in the bathing process with treats and plenty of loving kindness.

Basic First Aid For Your Pet:

What To Do In Case Of Emergency – Part I

Terrie Simpson

Have you ever heard of a situation of a stressed person trying to figure out how to dial 911? Believe me it happens. We had a medical emergency at our home and I had asked my husband to call 911. He was so stressed. I was listening for him to talk, and all I heard was paper rustling. He was looking in the phone book, trying to get the number for 911. Keep a list of emergency numbers by your telephone, preferably one that not only includes your veterinarians name and phone number, but also the name and phone number of an emergency animal hospital, plus your own name, address, and phone number.

Over the next couple of articles I will attempt to give a little insight to some common situations. You will find just as you did with the First Aid Kit, that there are a lot of similarities between animal and human needs. I must stress that the articles are just meant to be helpful just as taking a First Aid class is meant to be helpful. Never self diagnose your pet, consult a veterinarian. Hopefully, these articles can help until you can get professional treatment.

The concept of First Aid means: emergency care and treatment of an injured or ill patient until proper medical treatment is obtained. It may be critical to move the patient from further injury, but try not to make the situation worse ("DO NO HARM"). First Aid should never take the place of professional advice and care.

The first tool you will need is common sense. Remember, your pet cannot communicate to you the full nature of the injury or illness. Realize that your pet is probably going to be upset and frightened. Determine whether or not you will have to muzzle your pet. Take stock of the situation, and decide what equipment and help you will need. Relax yourself. Your being upset will only further upset your pet. Take a deep breath and talk calmly and softly to the injured pet. Use basic psychology. It works for pets as well. Treat your pet just as you would like to be treated in the same situation. You will accomplish more than you would expect. This will help your pet, yourself, and your veterinarian. Once you have conversed with a veterinarian and have decided to transport the pet to the hospital if necessary, DRIVE SAFELY! If a muzzle is necessary, one can be created from a belt, a necktie, or gauze. Wrap the gauze around the muzzle, cross the strips under the chin and then bring the gauze around the neck and tie it behind the ears. This will prevent the dog from biting you if it is upset. Small animals can be restrained in a blanket. Blankets can also be used to move an injured animal off the road. They can also be used warm and comfort an animal that is possibly going into shock. So, lets begin:

ALLERGIES

If you suspect allergies because the animal has hives, has swelling of the face or ears, vomiting or diarrhea, respiratory problems you should immediately contact your veterinarian. Some common allergies are spider bites, wasp or bee stings, foods, fleas, cedar, drugs such as penicillin or sulpham drugs. Keep your pet from biting or scratching itself, which may cause further problems such as infection. It's easier said than done.

ANAPHYLAXIS

This is a severe life threatening allergic reaction. In some cases not only will there be respiratory failure but also internal bleeding. This requires immediate veterinary treatment. Keep the pet warm and relaxed until you get there.

BURNS

It is rare that a dog gets burned accidentally by fire. Most common injuries are from falling into hot water, or having hot water or grease spilled on the animal. Pets can also get burns in the throat or esophagus from trying to eat hot foods that may have been dropped in the kitchen. All of these situations require veterinary care. Keep the pet relaxed in a clean spot until you get to the veterinarian.

BITE WOUNDS

Assess the severity of the wound. Wash with lots of clean fresh water. Bandage and apply a pressure bandage if the pet is bleeding severely. Determine if the biter has rabies. Contact the veterinarian who will determine how quickly the injured pet needs to be seen.

If Jiminy Cricket were a cricket for pets instead of Pinocchio, he wouldn't be singing "Let your conscience be your guide" he would be singing "Let your veterinarian be your guide".

Basic First Aid For Your Pet: What To Do In Case Of Emergency – Part II

Terrie Simpson

Just a reminder, before we continue on helpful Basic First Aid tips, the concept of this column is to help you provide care and treatment of your pet until you can obtain professional help through your veterinarian.

✓ Bites (snake)

Get your pet to a veterinarian immediately - keep both yourself and the pet quiet and still - if possible bring the dead snake with you. The head is essential to establish the type of snake to get the correct type of anti-venom.

Some veterinarians will recommend a tourniquet, others feel they are useless as the poison has already entered the bloodstream. If recommended, do this after you are on your way. Time is essential.

✓ Bites (cat)

Cats carry a certain bacteria in their mouth - watch for "cat scratch fever". All cat caused wounds should be thoroughly cleaned as soon as possible after the infliction.

✓ Bites (big dog little dog)

In a situation where a big dog was fighting with a little dog, it is a good idea to have the little dog checked by a veterinarian. There may be underlying injuries not as apparent as a bite wound.

✓ Bites (small wounds)

Clean the wound and use sterile dressings. Contact your veterinarian.

✓ Bites (large open wounds)

If the situation ever occurs where the dogs insides are outside, keep the evisceration moist with saline or water. Use sterile dressings. Do not try to replace the organs yourself. Try and control the bleeding and treat for shock. Transport immediately to a veterinarian. Try and keep both yourself and the pet as calm as possible.

✓ Bloat

This is an emergency that requires immediate veterinary assistance. Breeds with stomach tuck-up are more at risk (Boxers, Great Danes, Retrievers), than other breeds. The stomach turns and twists the intestines which cuts off circulation, etc. Watch for a bloated stomach, retching and white gums. A recommendation lately is to elevate the food dish as a possible prevention to this condition.

✓ Broken toe nails

Try to clip off the broken end. Use a commercial remedy, or corn starch to stop the bleeding. Bandage the paw to keep the wound clean. Change bandage frequently and watch for infection.

✓ Blistered or cut pads

Evaluate the size, depth, location of the wound, the source, amount of bleeding and check to see if there are contaminations such as glass, etc. in the wound. Is the wound a burn? Does it just need cleaning and bandaging, or does the wound need sutures?

✓ Chemicals

Any time you suspect your pet has ingested any type of chemical, such as antifreeze, slug bait, flea sprays, rat poisons, etc. contact the veterinarian immediately. Identify the product and take the package to the veterinarian with you. Depending on the chemical the veterinarian may recommend you induce vomiting with a couple of tablespoons of peroxide. He will not recommend vomiting if your pet has ingested caustics, acids, or petroleum distillates.

✓ Hit by a car

Always seek veterinary attention, even if the pet seems fine. Injuries could be superficial, or there could be spinal or internal injuries. Stabilize the pet and take it to a veterinarian.

✓ Diarrhea

Dogs and people get diarrhea from time to time. Usually Vomiting there is no real concern and can be treated with medicines such as Kaopectate (consult your veterinarian for dosage amounts for the size of your dog). Diarrhea becomes an emergency when it lasts more than 24 hours, if there is blood in the stool, if there is vomiting, if the dog is listless, not eating or acting ill, or if there is a fever. In these instances, immediately contact your veterinarian.

✓ Drugs

Any time a dog eats any type of human medication it is an emergency.

Also, non-prescribed drugs such as marijuana or hallucinogens can cause severe problems. Locate the bottle the drug came in and contact your veterinarian immediately. It is important to stop the absorption of the drug immediately. The veterinarian will likely recommend you induce vomiting by giving a couple of tablespoons of peroxide. Mustard also works.

✓ Electrocution

This usually happens with bored puppies looking for something to chew on. Prevention is worth a pound of cure. Keep electrical cords either unplugged or tucked away. Provide your puppy with ample toys and a restricted area in which to play safely. Electrocution will show very few signs of injury, but usually there is pulmonary injury to the heart and lungs. Any time you suspect electrocution immediately contact your veterinarian.

✓ Eye Injuries

This is a big emergency that requires immediate appropriate treatment in order to save the eye. If the eyeball has come out of the socket, do not try to replace it yourself. Rely on your veterinarian to do this. If the eyeball remains out of the socket too long the cornea will dry out, and it may not be possible to save the eye. On the veterinarian's advice, first aid can consist of applying eye drops or ointments to keep the eye moist. Tap water, or anything not recommended by the veterinarian can cause damage.

✓ Fractures

Any bone in a dog's body can be fractured. Fractured limbs are quite common. Fractures require treatment by your veterinarian. Attempts to immobilize the fracture with splints can cause more injury and pain for your pet. It is better to immobilize the whole pet and transport it to the veterinarian with a minimum amount of movement. Fractures are usually accompanied with shock, keep your pet calm and warm.

Remember: Do not panic, stay calm, assess the situation, evaluate the pet (do you need to muzzle it), and do not make the situation worse. Keep your veterinarian's telephone number in a handy location, and drive safely.

What To Do In Case Of Emergency – Part III

Terrie Simpson

✓ Rabies

Although cases are rare, there have been instances where the carriers are Brown Bats, Squirrels, and infected animals traveling within the area. Prevention is the best policy. Vaccinate your pet. If you suspect a rabid animal contact the SPCA. If your pet may have been bitten consult your veterinarian.

✓ Seizures

Animals cannot swallow their tongue and basically are in no condition to bite you. Keep both yourself and the pet calm and relaxed. Whether it is a human or an animal, the first aid provider must keep the patient from injuring itself any further. Some recommendations include suspending the pet like a mother cat carries its kittens or suspending the pet in a blanket (hammock style). Assess the situation. Determine the cause of the seizure. Was it trauma, temperature induced, drug induced, possible epilepsy, or unknown? Any situation involving a seizure requires veterinary follow-up.

✓ Shock

This is a very serious condition and requires immediate medical attention. The worst possible scenario for an injured patient who goes into shock is death. Watch for signs of disorientation, weakness, dazed or glazed expression, pale gums, and collapsing. Get the animal to lie down and keep it warm. If possible, elevate the feet. It is important to keep the blood flowing to the brain and prevent heat loss.

✓ Sunburns

Yes, pets that have exposed skin are subject to sunburn. You can use children's nontoxic sunscreen. Prevention is the best cure. In the case of sunburn, consult your veterinarian for topical ointment and make sure your pet is not also suffering from heat exhaustion or heat stroke. Provide plenty of fluids.

Dog Skin Secret #4

Dogs can get sunburned too – the best way to prevent this is by using children's nontoxic sunscreen.

✓ Spinal trauma

If you suspect spinal trauma, minimize the movement of the patient. Improvise a spinal board and transport the pet to the veterinarian. Keep the pet calm and quiet.

✓ Stings Bees

Sting bees leave poison sacks, other insects do not. Watch the swelling. Some animals can be allergic to stings. It's always a good idea to keep Benadryl in the home.

✓ Ticks Watch

Ticks watch for them in peak seasons. Remove them properly and thoroughly. Using tweezers carefully, steadily and slowly remove the tick ensuring you remove the mouthparts. Clean and disinfect the wound and your hands. Watch for symptoms of Lyme disease, which include (arthritis, depression, lethargy, fever, severe pain, and lameness). If you suspect Lyme Disease consult your veterinarian. Ask your Veterinarian about vaccinating for Lyme Disease.

✓ Toxic Substances

Just a quick reminder as we head into the Christmas season that many of our human traditions are toxic to the animals. If your pet has ingested any of the following items, consult your veterinarian - Christmas Rose, Poinsettia, Holly, Mistletoe, Soap Berries, Avocado, Nutmeg, Mushrooms, Spinach, Indian Laurel, and Chocolate.

✓ Whelping

Generally, any dog that is having a lapse of 5-6 hours between puppies and is still in labor needs to see a veterinarian. Any dog that becomes weak during labor should see a veterinarian for the sake of the unborn puppies and to prevent possible problems to the mother. The best source for answers to any of your medical concerns for your pet is always your veterinarian. Maintain regular checkups and vaccinations. Never hesitate to seek care for your loved one.

What You Should Have In Your Dog's First Aid Kit

Terrie Simpson

Almost every home, car, office, and job site has a first aid kit and attendant to attend the needs of the humans. Dog shows and trials have veterinarian hospitals listed for emergencies. But what about the pet which ends up hurt at home, in the car, or at the park? Ambulances and first aid attendants take care of our human needs until we can reach proper medical care. But who takes care of our pets?

We as conscientious owners can be somewhat prepared to help our pet by at least having a first aid kit prepared specifically for pet needs. Another way we can help our pet is by taking a pet First Aid course. Many local veterinarians offer First Aid courses. Some dog clubs also arrange for veterinarians to come teach classes to the group. Also, check with the local SPCA as some branches offer courses and are heavily involved in the community.

Taking a First Aid course will give you some confidence when assessing the medical situation involving your pet. You will also learn some basic skills to use at home for small emergencies and how to prepare yourself and your pet to enable you to transport it to a veterinary hospital in the event of a serious situation. Taking a First Aid course is never a substitute for professional care. If you ever have doubt about a pet's health or injury you should never hesitate to contact a professional.

Here is a list of some articles that should be included in a First Aid Kit for your pet. They should be kept in a handy sealed container in the home or in the car. Don't forget to take it with you when traveling.

- ✓ Gauze pads (based on the size of your dog)
- ✓ Gauze rolls -not only to bandage but to possibly muzzle your dog
- ✓ Cotton balls
- ✓ Q-tips

- ✓ Blunt nose scissors -to cut away long hair and tape
- ✓ Tweezers
- ✓ Thermometer
- ✓ Adhesive tape -athletic type is the best
- ✓ Sterile water
- ✓ Alcohol (99% solution)
- ✓ Hibitane soap (4% solution)
- ✓ Hydrogen peroxide (3% solution) -to induce vomiting or cleaning wounds
- ✓ An old sock -to protect bandaged feet
- ✓ Cohesive flexible bandage -great for wrapping a wound and not having it pull hair like adhesive bandages
- ✓ Ointment for small wounds and burns
- ✓ Eye drops or ointment
- ✓ Ear cleanser and dryer
- ✓ Spoon or syringe for administering fluids
- ✓ Towel or blanket -serves many purposes: controlling temperature, transporting the pet, controlling the pet
- ✓ Zip lock bags -to contain urine or fecal matter -to keep bleeding paws from staining your clothes, etc.
- ✓ Quarters
- ✓ Your veterinarians name and phone number written down on a sheet with
- ✓ Your name and your dog's name written down as well. Any medications your dog usually takes.

Other useful items to include are Maalox, Kaopectate, Pepto-Bismal and buffered aspirin. Never administer without first consulting with your veterinarian for the dosage and proper usage based on the needs and size of your dog.

Watch the expiry dates and replace when necessary for optimum effect of the medicines. And most importantly, remember self-diagnosis is your worst doctor. When in doubt always consult with your local veterinarian.

How To Care For Your Dog's Feet And Save On Vet Bills Down The Line

Terrie Simpson

Even though it may be an obvious fact, dogs have four feet. These four feet have no protection. As the caregivers for our companions, we need to take special care of our pets feet to ensure their pads do not become over-calloused or tender.

Be careful not to over-exercise your pet, ensuring that they do not get blisters or split pads. Exercise should start slowly and increase gradually. It is not a wise idea to exercise your dog by forcing it to run alongside a bicycle or car, as you cannot readily check for exhaustion or foot problems. Your exercise program should end by checking the condition of your pets feet.

Grooming is an essential part of the care of our pet's feet. Ensure your dog gets it's nails clipped regularly. Overgrown nails will curl into the dogs pads. Nails can also split if not clipped. Long nails can also cause a dog's feet to spread or splay. Trimming the hair around the pads can also reduce the amount debris that can get lodged between the pads which will cause injury.

Dog Skin Secret #5

Trimming the hair around the pads can also reduce the amount debris that can get lodged between the pads which will cause injury. After walks or exercise run your fingers over and between the pads checking for stuck materials such as rocks, gum, thorns, glass, impacted snow/ice, etc. Do this and you'll save on vet bills down the line.

After walks or exercise run your fingers over and between the pads checking for stuck materials such as rocks, gum, thorns, glass, impacted snow/ice, etc. Also check for sore spots. As you get to know your dog, check for spreading or splaying. In older dogs conditions such as arthritis may cause splaying.

At certain times of the year there may be bio-hazards on the ground from people using fertilizers, weed killers, or chemicals used for ice or snow removal. It may be wise to wash your dogs feet with warm water and baking soda regularly after your walk or exercise period.

If your pets feet are sore, reduce exercise and bathe the feet. If the condition persists consult your veterinarian as soon as possible. Your pets feet are their means of mobility.

What To Do If Your Dog Has Skin Problems

Terrie Simpson

Under all that copious fur there is skin. Skin that is susceptible to a myriad of diseases and afflictions just as we humans are. The difference being that in humans we can readily see a health problem. In a dog, skin health problems are not readily apparent until the dog gives us an indication. Usually, the indications are excessive licking and scratching. In general we humans tend to take our skin for granted. If we go out into the sun, we use sun screen. If we have dry skin, we use a lotion. And occasionally we notice irregularities and then we go to the doctor. We're pretty complacent and tend to think of skin as the wrap that molds our body. With dogs, the skin goes beyond being a mold. It is an organ in itself. This organ regulates the heat in a dogs body and works in conjunction with the foot pads which allow the dog to perspire.

As with humans the skin communicates sensations such as pain, heat, cold, touch, etc. to the brain. An animal's skin also processes vitamin D just as we do. When we take our pet to the veterinarian, one of the usual examinations done is one of the skin. When the veterinarian back brushes the fur he/she is not only looking for parasites such as fleas and mites, but they are also looking at the skin. Dry skin and fur can indicate illness. Yellow skin can indicate jaundice and blue skin can indicate heart problems. Rashes can mean allergies.

Dog Skin Secret #6

Check your dog's skin regularly - yellow skin can indicate jaundice and blue skin can indicate heart problems.

Dogs can have seasonal and environmental allergies as well as food allergies. Food allergies may not always be associated with new foods but can also come from foods they have eaten for years and have become sensitive to due to many reasons. So called "hot-spots", for example may be a result of a dog no longer being able to digest a certain food. Your veterinarian will recommend ways to test your dogs diet and recommend a course of treatment. Many dogs such as spaniels have seasonal and environmental allergies which can manifest themselves not only with sneezing and watery eyes, but also with skin rashes.

Allergies to fleas and medicines can also cause skin rashes. There are now veterinarians who are specializing in animal allergies and dermatology. Should your veterinarian find it necessary a referral could be made for diagnosis and treatment.

There are also genetic skin disorders and glandular skin disorders. There are several diseases associated with ovarian and testicular problems. Diagnosis and treatment can be made by your veterinarian. Dogs are also susceptible to various types of skin fungus. They are highly contagious to humans and other animals. Mange is another skin disease that is contagious. Quick diagnosis and treatment is essential.

In addition to the previously mentioned skin problems, there are also seborrheic (seborrhea) skin diseases, tumors, melanomas, infected sores, mites, etc., that can be diagnosed by your veterinarian.

The purpose of this article is to make owners aware that the care and regular examination of your dogs skin is essential. Before buying a dog, consult with the breeder and a veterinarian. Know the diseases which are specific to the breed you desire. Know your dog's body as you should know your own. Check for skin problems during regular grooming.

If you find an area of concern, consult your veterinarian immediately. Do not make a self-diagnosis and start a course of treatment. Only a veterinarian can make a proper diagnosis and recommend oral and/or topical treatments. Delay in proper diagnosis and treatment can cause delay in recovery and possible spread of the ailment and unnecessary prolonged discomfort for your beloved pet.

Dog Skin Problems: How to Treat Dog Skin Rashes

Brandon Roe

In this article “Dog Skin Problems: How to treat dog skin rashes”, I’ll explore what may be causing your dog’s skin rashes and suggest some ways to treat this annoying dog skin problem.

Say you have an itch that just won’t stop. What you will most likely do (after almost scratching your skin off!) is go directly to the nearest pharmacy and ask the pharmacist for the most potent cortisone or antihistamine that their store has. Then you lather or drink that drug up like there is no tomorrow.

Having an excruciating back ache or a smashing headache is a nuisance but if you have a skin rash you feel very, very itchy and it’s like you’re in living hell and your nails aren’t doing justice to what you feel.

Now imagine the same unbearable skin rash, only this time, you cannot go to your favorite pharmacy and you cannot just tell a doctor to treat you up because you cannot speak. Sounds like a real dreadful situation? Well, this is how your four-legged bundle of joy actually feels when he or she has a dog skin rash!

Causes

Dog skin rashes are very difficult to treat because you never know what causes them. So, really the best thing you can do for your beloved dog is to prevent the skin rashes from occurring. Here are some ways on how you can avoid this from happening:

- The number one cause of dog skin rashes are external dog parasites such as ticks, fleas, lice and mites. To avoid these external parasites, do not let your dog play with strangers’ pets unless you are sure they are not infected. Always keep your furry friend’s house parasite free by cleaning it well and in case that parasites do attack, treat your dog with a tick and flea shampoo or cream.

Dog Skin Secret #7

The number one cause of dog skin rashes are external dog parasites such as ticks, fleas, lice and mites. To avoid these external parasites, do not let your dog play with strangers' pets unless you are sure they are not infected.

- Internal parasites can also cause dog skin rashes so to avoid intestinal parasites, make sure that both the water and food that your loyal dog takes in are clean.
- Comb or brush the coat of your dog regularly especially if your pup has thick and long hair. Tangled hair can cause the skin to become irritated which can lead to scratching.
- Find a shampoo that does not dry out your dog's skin if you like to bathe your doggie regularly.
- Make sure you buy good quality dog chow to boost your dog's immune system. Commercial grade dog food is usually just filled with extenders that have no additional nutritional value unlike good dog food.

Solution

But a dog cannot avoid skin rashes forever. Even if you are the most attentive, cleanest and most caring dog parent, he or she will still get skin rashes at one point in his or her doggie life. So what do you do in times when your furry friend is scratching and gnawing at his or her skin like crazy?

- First of all, give your dog a bath. Find a shampoo that is both medicinal and at the same time, anti tick and fleas.
- Check the food that your dog eats. If you've just changed your dog's food brand, and he or she seems to have acquired the habit of scratching, then you may need to buy your old brand back because the new one is making your poor pooch itch. Better yet, consider some of the natural diets. Type in “BARF diet” on the Internet and you'll find a lot of great resources. Keep in mind that certain breeds are pre-disposed to certain allergies (I.e. Shih Tzus tend to be allergic to chicken). If, in any doubt, talk to a holistic minded veterinarian or nutritionist who can show you the proper meal plan.

Dog Skin Secret #8

Food can cause skin itching! You may want to consider natural diets such as the BARF diet.

- Some dogs are itching because they are restless. Giving your dog enough exercise might just do the trick.
- You may also consider purchasing products that specialize in treating dog skin rashes. There are a variety out there but one of the most effective ones I've ever seen contains the Mayan traditional herb Tepezcohuite. (In fact, I was so impressed with its natural abilities that I created an all-natural dog balm called K9 KlearUp around this compound – www.k9klearup.com. It's guaranteed to help clear up the 17 most common canine skin and coat problems).

So there you have it, some simple solutions to help get rid of a severe dog skin problem: skin rashes. Your dog should be wagging his tail again in no time!

A Safe And Effective Product I Am Happy To Recommend To My Patients

"I've been using K9 KlearUp in my veterinary clinic for a few weeks now and have found it to be very effective with a number of the most common canine skin and coat problems, especially Hot Spots and Dermatitis.

We recently had a client bring her Shih Tzu in that chewed constantly in an area right underneath her tail. Over time, the skin in that area became inflamed and irritated. As a remedy, I applied K9 KlearUp twice daily and along with a change in diet, her rash cleared up completely within 5 days.

In addition to its effectiveness, I appreciate the short and simple list of ingredients in the product. I have to deal with a lot of dogs who each have many different allergies and it's nice that this product is simple enough for me to use on virtually any animal without fear of adverse reactions.

Finally, from a strictly practical point of view, it's nice to have a product that isn't greasy, isn't runny and absorbs into the skin quickly.

I plan on continuing to use it in my practice and am quite comfortable recommending it to all of my clients or any other dog owners for that matter."

"When I first found out about your product, I was a little skeptical but decided to try it out anyways... and I'm really glad I did.

"Within 2 days, the rash was almost gone. And funny enough, on the 3rd day, when it came time to apply the cream, she actually presented her chin to me as if she wanted to say, "Put it on. It's so good for me.

"I will definitely recommend your product to all of my clients."

K9 KlearUp Even Works On Chronic Conditions That Refuse To Go Away No Matter What Treatment Is Given

Nothing Worked, Except K9 KlearUp

I decided to try K9 KlearUp and see if it could help our Gremlin, who suffers from eczema on his ears (scratching till he bled & left sores).

We needed a product that was safe for our young son and safe for the baby pups who are born in our home--we are a small Hobby breeder of Chihuahua's.

The all natural ingredients were a Great way to ensure everyone in our home was safe from harmful chemicals.

Within a few days, the results were unbelievable. Grem's sores healed up and have Not Returned!! He has not continued to scratch and his relief is obvious.

We spent Mega-$-, on prescription creams from our vet (who is awesome), Grem is on an all natural super premium dog food--but nothing helped--Except your K9 KlearUp!!"

After Only 2 Applications of K9 KlearUp, The Skin Was Starting To Heal

"In the summer, the tips of our German Shepherd's ears are always dry, cracked and bleeding. After only 2 applications of K9 KlearUp, the skin was starting to heal. After the 5th application the sores were almost completely gone. This really shocked us because our veterinarian told us that all German Shepherds have this ailment and just apply moisturizer to get rid of the dryness. Moisturizer never worked. It was just a temporary fix. We are so glad we found your website."

Willow Is Finally Scratch-Free

"My dog Willow had three nasty patches on her back that appeared to be boils of some sort with red irritated skin. She had been biting and scratching these spots for quite some time. Antibiotic creams produced no relief. Online, one day, I saw an advertisement for K9 KlearUp. I thought it wouldn't hurt to try it. The day I received it in the mail, I immediately applied it to Willow's sore spots. The following day, I was going to re-apply the ointment thinking that more than one dose was needed but I was amazed to see that the spots had cleared up. Needless to say, Willow is no longer scratching. We both thank you."

Some More Success Stories

I Was Very Impressed

"Queeny was forever scratching her sides due to some hot spots and we had tried everything but nothing seemed to help. Once I received K9 KlearUp, I was nervous to use it, but I was very impressed after several days she was not scratching like before and finally it was cleared up. I will definitely tell friends about your product. Using K9 KlearUp was a wonderful choice for our dog. Thank you!"

"It Was Like a Miracle Cure!"

"Cruiser had hot spots. He was always chewing and pulling out his fur in certain places. I put K9 KlearUp on him and it seemed like overnight he was not pulling out his fur any more. It was like a miracle cure! I had tried everything else people told me to try. Now, his fur is finally growing back and he is sleeping better. He is a much happier guy now. I do know he loves you for sending him some peace! I still can't believe how well it worked!!!! Cruiser and I thank you so very much!"

I Just Ordered My Second Jar

"My oldest boy Lucky, an 8 year-old Yorkshire Terrier, has been suffering with sores, that turn into dark crusty spots on his body for almost a year. The vet took a biopsy and said it was both bacterial and fungal, then put him on some pills that did no good whatsoever. I have tried so many creams/lotions/shampoos and nothing worked.

Lucky's body was getting covered and getting worse. Then I purchased K9 KlearUp, and I started covering him with the cream every night. I am happy to say that your cream is working! The spots are drying up and his skin is turning pink again! We are pleased that Lucky is so much better. He suffered for a long time, while I tried everything I could find. I don't want to run out, so I just ordered my second jar of K9 KlearUp."

I Was Skeptical At First

"I have to admit that I was skeptical at first about using K9 KlearUp on our yellow lab, Chelsey. Then one day she was attacked by a swarm of horse flies that left an oozing red sore on her nose. Chelsey was miserable and pawed at the sore constantly. I applied your salve twice a day for 4 days and the sore healed up completely! Unbelievable - your product is amazing!"

Hot Spots Disappear After 3 Days

"My ten-year old Rottweiler developed hot spots on his back and legs recently, and I felt awful for him as he chewed at them constantly. I began applying your healing balm to his spots daily. By the end of the first day, he had stopped chewing at his fur. After three days, the spots were healing up and the fur has already begun growing back. He's a happy little guy again!"

Chronic Problem Controlled By K9 KlearUp

"I have a 1 1/2 year old Chocolate lab/German Pointer cross named Barkley who has been a member of our family since she was 7 weeks old.

Ever since she was a puppy, she has had re-occurring hot spots in her ears. It is just one of those things that her breed is prone to. We have been back and forth between the vet clinics trying everything from pills to creams to ear drops.

Not only does this product help control the uncomfortable, red, itchy spots in Barkley's ears, it doesn't leave a greasy mess like drops, and you do not have to hide large pills in your pets food.

"The best part about this product is it is all natural and I have piece of mind knowing this product is safe for my pet."

Reduced His Scratching

"I tried it on an itchy spot that Jovi has. It certainly seems to have reduced his scratching. I am anxious to tell my cousin about this product as she has a dog who is terribly burdened with skin problems. I'm sure she will be very interested. Thank you so much."

Ran Around Like A Puppy

"Chuck has some itchy 'old man dog' areas especially near his tail. He has been suffering since the onset of fall. I applied K9 KlearUp to his itch and he ran around like a puppy! He has been content and I do wish to take care of the other itches on his sides. They appear to be 'hot spots' and I did try other treatments with no luck! We love your product!! It's wonderful!"

We Have Seen A Difference

"We have a Great Pyrenees (Hank), 2 Miniature pinchers (Jasmine & Pete), also a English Bulldog (Chloe).

Hank has hot spots in the summer. Pete is okay, but Jasmine has a chronic ear problem, scratching that has been treated by the vet but no relief so far. Chloe has the usual problems with hot spots and skin rashes due to her breed and being white!

I tried K9 KlearUp and did not think it would really help Jasmine, or Chloe's rash, but it has been 4 days now and we have seen a difference! Jasmine is not rubbing her ear along the porch as much and the scabs from her nails are actually healing! Chloe's rash has gone from dark red spots to a light blush color.

The antibiotics that the vets prescribed did help a little but not this fast!"
